

Everyone once asked himself a question: „What am I doing here?“. And from that point everything started.

People are ready to leave their own devotion and get out of the previous sights. They run through the woods, swim across the oceans and fly over the rising hills to find... what? Not a better place to live, money or cows to feed. Just themselves. It is an ageless need whispering to their ears: "Go". So they do. They only think that they are looking for themselves. But don't be naive. This is not a point you can reach and then live your peaceful life till the death. Even though you think that you found the quest of your journey, while reading a book somewhere in a wild forest in Sweden, you're wrong. You will be travelling as long as it possible. One day you will realize that the place you were travelling to was just your mind.

The only right thing to do in life is just to follow the path that your heart chooses. Otherwise, every dream you've neglected, will turn to a huge grief. Life is plenty of choices and dilemmas. Some ways seem to be closed but what would the life be without breaking barriers?

You are the one who has got the power to create the pathway to take, the one who decides where to go, not to hide. There's no need to hide away when you are trying to find yourself wherever you are.